VOTERS CANNOT CHANGE PARTY REGISTRATION

(From Saturday's Daily.)

According to a decision handed down by the Superior court in Co-chise county, voters who have already registered cannot change their party registration before the primary election September 12th. Several weeks ago a voter in Cochise decided to change his party registration. The county recorder refused and a test case was made of the incident, with the result that the court decided in favor of the recorder.

Many voters in this county have attempted to change their registration blanks, according to Recorder L. S. Colwell, with the result that registration officers have been caused an unnecessary amount of work in endeavoring to find out if such an action would be legal.

APPROPRIATES WATER

(From Sunday's Daily.)

L. LaBarr yesterday filed notice of the appropriation of all water from Sun Flower springs, located on the millsite bearing that name in Copper Basin district. LaBarr plans to ditch the water and use it in reducing ores of the Rainy Day group of claims.

REPUBLICANS OF MOHAVE ARE CONFIDENT

Special to the Journal-Miner.

KINGMAN, Aug. 28.—The visit of Tom Campbell, Republican candidate for governor, to the Democratic stronghold of the State, has given the Republicans of Mohave county such a renewal of energy and hope that many of them are predicting the election of the Republican county ticket.

The Democrats are divided by local differences of opinion, and the people generally are dissatisfied with the way things have been going under Democratic control. In the northern part of the county where taxpayers are called on to bear a portion of the expense for improvements in Kingman which is not incorporated, and in addition have been entirely forgotten in many of the things they have demanded, there is open hostility to the present county administration.

The Republicans have strong men in the field, and are out to win control of county affairs and give the people of the whole county a fair deal.

Tom Campbell's personal strength in Mohave county was apparent wherever he went. Not only are the people friendly to him personally, but they believe in his policy of a fair deal to all, which is exemplified in his public service in Arizona, and they are seriously considering whether Arizona can afford to lose this opportunity of securing his services in the greater field opened by the governorship.

As a mine operator many of the miners now in Mohave county worked for Tom Campbell, and they are spreading the word of his fairness to labor and his genuine interest in their desires to better the condition of the workers. He does not have to appeal to the miners for his past record of many years as an employer of miners stands out to vindicate him, and the hundreds of men who formerly worked for him in the mines are forceful campaigners in his behalf.

All through the northern part of the State are to be found ardent Tom Campbell workers, regardless of political faith. That independence of thought and action which is inherent in strong men, is creating a current that is silently rallying to Tom Campbell and his aspirations to serve his native State as its governor. This thought will increase as the campaign progresses and party lines will be shaken in Arizona in November to an extent never known in the State before.

Mr. Campbell, who is accompanied by Doane Merrill, Republican candidate for State auditor, and George H. Smalley, candidate for State tax commissioner, visited Chloride and other precincts in Mohave county, and will proceed over the eastern portion of the State.

Mr. Merrill has developed tireless ability as a campaigner. Every precinct he visits old friends appear to greet him, for Mr. Merrill is one of the really old-timers. As a campaigner he stands next to Tom Campbell, which is an enviable achievement for a tenderfoot in the political game, for Arizona has never produced a better campaigner than Tom Campbell.

George H. Smalley is meeting many old friends in the mining camps, and the people recall his boasts of their mining properties which appeared in the mining journals when he was a mining correspondent. His work in taxation matters in the State has added to his standing, and the people believe that he will be of great service to the State as tax commissioner. Mr. Smalley's budget plan devised to stop the waste of public money in the State and counties is meeting with approval everywhere.
